

Christina Severin, MPH

Christina Severin is an accomplished health care executive with more than 25 years' experience in managed care, delivery systems, health insurance, Accountable Care Organizations, quality, public policy, and public health.

Christina is the President & CEO of Community Care Cooperative (C3), a Massachusetts non-profit company organized as a federally qualified health center-based MassHealth Accountable Care Organization (ACO). Unlike any other independent MassHealth ACO, C3 is a primary-care driven organization and has a care model that seeks to address its members' social, behavioral and physical health needs. C3 is the largest FQHC-based ACO in the United States. In its first full year of business in 2018, C3 was recognized as a Top 100 Women Led business, placing at number ten.

Immediately prior to this, Christina was an independent consult, with engagements in both the public and private sectors. All of her engagements were working with clients on issues that disproportionately affect vulnerable populations. Most notably, following several high-profile tragedies, Christina spent 10-months working with the Department of Children and Families to implement several new child welfare policies agency-wide as part of an effort to enhance child safety and welfare.

Prior to this, Christina served as President and Chief Executive Officer of Beth Israel Deaconess Care Organization (BIDCO), a value-based, physician and hospital network and an Accountable Care Organization (ACO). In this role, she was responsible for overseeing all aspects of the organization, including leading strategic plans to effectively manage cost trends, optimize health care quality, and expand its network of physicians and hospitals.

Christina previously served as President of Network Health, a nonprofit Massachusetts health plan that was acquired by Tufts Health Plan, where she led the health plan's dramatic growth and strategic direction.

Christina earned a Master of Public Health with a concentration in Health Services from Boston University School of Public Health, and a Bachelor of Arts in Political Economy from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.
